

Element 11 Warnings and Bans Policy

Members of the Element 11 (Utah Burner) community may receive a formal warning letter or a formal ban letter for conduct which is deemed to jeopardize the safety of event participants. Individuals may be banned from attending some or all of Element 11 events or barred from volunteering in some or all capacities.

The Board of Directors (the Board) may issue an official warning or ban if a participant:

- Has a pattern of violating the Code of Conduct or event policies, endangering the event or its participants' safety.
- Has any single well-substantiated report of a serious violation.
- Continues engaging in harmful behavior after receiving a warning from the Board about such behavior.

The Board may also choose to issue a ban for reasons not covered in this policy.

Informing banned individuals of their status

- The Board will send a letter notifying the recipient of a ban specifying terms and duration.
- If a person who has never attended any of the Element 11 events is banned, they will be informed of the ban if they attempt to attend an event.

When are people unbanned?

- Bans are instituted for one year or indefinitely, as specified in the notification letter.
- One-year bans end automatically at the end of the calendar year as specified in the notification letter; there will be no notification letter to signify the end of a ban.
- The Board can choose to renew a one-year ban, which will result in a new notification letter.

Appeals Process

- Individuals can appeal to have their ban lifted.
 - Appeal the ban directly to the Board: bod@element11.org
 - Appeals will be handled at an upcoming scheduled Board meeting.
 - Only one appeal request per individual will be heard per year.

Publishing bans

In cases where the Board determines that publishing a ban would benefit the community or other communities, it will determine whether or how such an announcement should be made.

Inquiries about banned individuals

The Board may share ban information with other entities at their discretion. Attendees may also inquire if any individual has registered or been ticketed for any event. Email such requests to bod@element11.org.

Barring people from positions of responsibility

Element 11 reserves the right to prevent someone from volunteering.
